Restored independence [edit]

After World War I the Russian Empire collapsed and Estonia declared its independence in 1918. Estonia proclaimed its independence on 24 February 1918, Latvia on 18 November 1918, and Lithuania on 16 February 1918. Since the declaration of independence, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania have been recognized as independent states by many countries, including Soviet Russia, Germany, Finland, Poland, Iceland, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, the United States and Soviet Russia recognized the Baltic states de jure (with exceptions) in 1920 and 1924. Since the declaration of independence, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania have been recognized as independent states by many countries, including Soviet Russia, Germany, Finland, Poland, Iceland, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, the United States and Soviet Russia recognized the Baltic states de jure (with exceptions) in 1920 and 1924.

Soviet Russian Red Guards

Soviet Russian Red Guards

Russia's tolerance for Independent Baltic States, which was founded in 1917, was short-lived. Soviet Russian Red Guards invaded the Baltic States in 1918 and occupied the Baltic states in 1918 and 1919. Since the declaration of independence, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania have been recognized as independent states by many countries, including Soviet Russia, Germany, Finland, Poland, Iceland, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, the United States and Soviet Russia recognized the Baltic states de jure (with exceptions) in 1920 and 1924

Economy

Kaunas Bridge pedestrian zone of the Old Old City of Lithuania from 17 October 1915 to 1 January 1921 during the days of Soviet Union. Old Old Town Square, 2010 Trading Fair Vilnius Lithuania, the Russian Blitz was established in 1991 and is the oldest trade fair in the Baltic States.

Kaunas is a large center of industry, trade, and commerce. The most developed industries in Kaunas are amongst the food and beverage industries, chemicals, and metal goods. Other important industries include pharmaceuticals, electronics, wood products, and processing and furniture. Recently information technology and consulting services have become part of the city's economy. Kaunas is home to Lithuania's Free Economic Zone, which includes Lithuania's biggest industrial complex, but its activities have been hindered by high and social contradictions.[1]

Kaunas's Soviet-era industrial factories are companies from the Western. Under Soviet rule, Kaunas was a major center for the Soviet Union's military industry. Major international and Lithuanian companies are located in Kaunas, including Philip Morris International, Baltic Beverages Holding, Lifosa, Maxima, and spinoffs of approximately 30 Kaunas, one of the largest companies in Lithuania, and Kaunas' JSC "Baltocrop", largest producer in Lithuania of energy drinks Monte Christo, Kaunas Beer Factory, Kaunas Tobacco Factory, Kaunas Tyre Factory, Kaunas Pharmaceutical Factory, Kaunas Pharmaceutical Factory, and other producers of homeopathic medicines in Lithuania.[2] The geographic location causes Kaunas to be a major transport hub for Lithuania. Kaunas Airport is the second-busiest airport in Lithuania and handles about 1,000,000 passengers annually.[3] Kaunas's Technical University of Lithuania is a company formed in the Baltic Technical University, which has been operated in Kaunas. Currently, Kaunas Public Logistics Center is a joint venture between the Kaunas City Municipality and Lithuanian Railways. The Kaunas Public Logistics Center is a joint venture between the Kaunas City Municipality and Lithuanian Railways. The project includes storing of perishable, in-line with Lithuanian warehouses, building the energetical transport and logistics center, and building a new Kaunas Public Logistics Center. Kaunas is the 3rd-largest city in the Baltic Sea, the 3rd-largest in Lithuania, and 3.5 km (2.1 mi) in Kaunas from the Lithuanian Sea. The resources of Kaunas's industrial complex are located in the Kaunas Free Economic Zone, which is the largest industrial complex in the Baltic States.[4]

Kaunas is the center for the organization, and has developed a scheme for the Kaunas Urban Transport Development Plan, prepared by the Kaunas Municipality and the Kaunas City Municipality. Kaunas's Technical University of Lithuania is the largest in Lithuania.[5] Kaunas

Some notable changes are under construction and planned. The construction of a Kaunas Free Economic Zone, which is the largest industrial complex in Lithuania, is being hindered by the Lithuanian Government's decision, which has hindered the development of the Kaunas Free Economic Zone, which has hindered the development of the Kaunas Free Economic Zone, which has hindered the development of the Kaunas Free Economic Zone
